Glossary & Risk Considerations

The S&P 500 Index is an American broad market index based on the market capitalizations of 500 large companies having common stock listed on the NYSE or NASDAQ.

The Bloomberg Barclays US Aggregate Bond Index is representative of the entire universe of taxable fixed-income investments. It includes issues of the U.S. Government and any agency thereof, corporate issues of investment grade quality (Baa/BBB or better), and mortgage-backed securities.

Unmanaged index returns do not reflect any fees, expenses or sales charges, and it is not possible to invest directly in an index.

Alpha is a measure of the difference between a portfolio's actual returns and its expected performance, given its level of risk as measured by beta. Beta is a measure of volatility, or systematic risk, of a portfolio in comparison to a benchmark. A beta greater than one indicates more volatility, while a beta less than one indicates less volatility than the relevant benchmark. R-squared is a measure of how close the relationship is between a portfolio and its benchmark. Standard Deviation is a measure of the dispersion of investment returns from the mean. A higher standard deviation indicates higher volatility. Sharpe Ratio is a measurement of reward per unit of risk as calculated by the average monthly excess return divided by the monthly standard deviation of excess returns. Capture Ratio is the ratio of upside capture to downside capture. Upside capture is the statistical measure of an investment manager's overall performance in up-markets. The upside capture ratio is used to evaluate how well an investment manager performed relative to an index during periods when that index has risen. Downside capture is a statistical measure of an investment manager's overall performance in down-markets. Downside capture ratio is used to evaluate how well an investment manager performed relative to an index during periods when that index has exhibited negative performance.

Important Risk Information

The Fund is a 'fund of funds' and typically invests in other investment companies and exchange traded funds ("ETFs"). Costs of investing in the Fund are generally higher than direct investments and investors may bear the fees, expenses, and brokerage costs charged by the ETFs. ETFs carry security, market and sector risks, and may not perform as expected which could result in a decline in value. When the Fund invests in ETFs that own fixed income securities, the value of your investment in the Fund will fluctuate with changes in interest rates. The use of leverage and inverse leveraged ETF's may exaggerate changes in price and return. Accordingly, values may be more volatile and the risk of loss magnified when compared to non-leveraged investments. Other possible risks to the Fund include those related to investment in small and medium sized companies, foreign securities, currencies and emerging markets, and short-term trading. Please review the prospectus carefully for additional details.

Mutual Funds involve risk including the possible loss of principal.

Investors should carefully consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses of the Innealta Funds.
